COUNTY INSTITUTIONS SLASHED BY GOVERNOR

State College, Rockview and Bellefonte Hospital Suffer.

VETO BEAVER STATUE

Governor Pinchot slashed Centre County institutions and interests right and left in disposing of appropriation measures last week. The reduction by the Governor in the amounts awarded by the Legislature will seriously cripple such institutions during the coming two years.

Pennsylvania State College, which the Governor originally wanted to give but $1,250,000, was allowed $2,163,600, which is $218,000 less than the college received from the State two years ago. The Governor lopped off over $800,000 from the amount appropriated by the recent Legislature. After the hard-st kind of a struggle the friends of State College succeeded in having the recent Legislature appropriate $2,993,915. Of the $2,163,600 allowed by Governor Pinchot, the college must apply $1,513,600 toward general maintenance; $500,000 for agriculture and home economics; $50,000 for research and experimental work.

What the Governor's action in reducing the Penn State appropriation by more than $800,000 means is that not a dollar will be available for the construction of necessary new buildings during the coming two years. In other words, if Penn State is to further expand its work during that period it must do so with equipment and buildings on hand. For the time being, the splendid progress achieved in recent years by State College has been effectively blocked.

Governor Pinchot also struck out the one other course open to State College to continue to forge ahead. He vetoed a bill which the Legislature had passed and which would enable the college to borrow $2,000,000 for the erection and equipment of necessary buildings and to liquidate present mortgage indebtedness. The veto of this bill staggered the friends of the college.

Moreover, the Governor has made it known that he is determined to carry out his demand of several months ago that the forestry school at Penn State be transferred to Mt. Alto. It is said that the Governor just a short time ago insisted that students in forestry at State College who were actually ready for graduation be not permitted to graduate, because of his plan to transfer forestry work to Mt. Alto. The school at the latter place is conducted under the supervision of the State Forestry Department. Forestry at State College has been developing for some years at a rapid pace, and in time would become one of the leading branches of study there. Even before he became Governor, Mr. Pinchot agitated transferring this department from State College to Mt. Alto. As Governor, he has put the matter up to Penn State in the form of an abrupt demand. How matters will work out is problematical.

Forecasts of a radical shaking up of the general plan for a great prison project at Rockview nearby Bellefonte, are borne out by the action of the Governor in reducing the appropriation of $450,000 for construction work to $245,000. It is said that the Governor favors divorcing Rockview from the western penitentiary and giving it a separate warden, thereby insuring its operation on the small prison scale.

The Bellefonte hospital also suffered at the hands of Governor Pinchot. At no time has the hospital had sufficient funds to function satisfactorily. In fact, it has been kept going largely through the tireless efforts of the women, and some few men, who at great personal sacrifice have striven to make both ends meet. Two years ago Governor Spruill allowed the hospital $12,000. The recent Legislature awarded it $16,500. Governor Pinchot cut this down to $10,000 for the next two years. How the hospital will be able to maintain its high rate of efficiency on such a meagre allowance its friends are unable to figure out.

An appropriation of $100,000 for the erection by Washington & Jefferson College of a memorial statue in honor of the late Governor James A. Beaver, of Bellefonte, was also vetoed by the Governor.

In striking contrast to the appropriation allowed Penn State, the Governor awarded the University of Pennsylvania and Temple University, Philadelphia, and the University of Pittsburgh the same amounts as were given them by Governor Spruill two years ago.

A. G. Morris, of Bellefonte, was denied reappointment to the board of trustees of Huntingdon Reformatory by Governor Pinchot. Mr. Morris had been president of the board.

VISIT S. S. CAMP SITE

Indications Are That It Will Prove Ideal for Training Purposes.

Many local folks have visited the past three weeks at the new Mid-State Sunday School Training camp, near Franklintonville and Spruce Creek, in Huntingdon County, visits being made at this time more particularly because of Camp A. G. Morris, of the Bellefonte Y. M. C. A., of more than 40 local boys. The boys were under S. S. Apila and his experience in camp life enabled him to show them a good time.

The camp site is a remarkable place for training purposes of young people. It embraces 135 acres of land. Carpenters, plumbers, electricians and other skilled workers have been very busy the past few weeks getting tent platforms, putting in a water supply system, fed by 3 springs of excellent water; and getting the big mess hall and kitchen in good shape.

A hill rises abruptly about the centre of the tract and it is studded with beautiful trees, making a delightful setting for the camp tents, of which there are to be 35.

The boys attending the A. G. Morris camp returned home on Friday. They have been in camp from 1 to 3 weeks. Finding turtles, fair-sized ones and little ones, were one of the apparently harmless amusements. The boys went to bed at 9:30 and got up at 6:30 fast time. After breakfast and religious exercises there were exercise and drill, then a swim each day.

Next week the State Sabbath School Assn. activities start in earnest at the camp. From all parts of the state young women, all told about 160, will gather for 2 weeks camp. The second 2 weeks will be for adults and the last 2 weeks for young men. Sunday Schools at various places will send their delegates, generally 2 to 4 from each school.

A large dam for bathing, swimming and boating is being constructed. It will be supplied by Warriors run, a small stream that flows through the land. It is estimated the dam will cover about 13 acres of land and will be 13 feet deep at the breast, becoming shallow gradually toward the hill mentioned until a very nice wading depth is reached.

ACADEMY FOOTBALL

Counting on Enrolling Fast Players and Strong Schedule.

The Bellefonte football schedule will soon be completed with the opening game at home, likely with the Altoona Indians or Bellwood as opponents. Coach Snavely has already secured the bulk of his squad.

Young men listed as best athletes in New York state, Ohio, West Virginia and Pennsylvania are among the number. Blackburn, O'Neil, Breen, Mosko, O'Brien, Archibald, will probably be the veteran nucleus around which Snavely will build. The list of new boys will include some nationally prominent High School athletes and some young players from several of the best independent teams in Western Pennsylvania.

The opening game will be plenty hard enough, it is said, to test the metal of candidates and will determine the lineup for the second game, which is at Philadelphia with Penn Fresh, which has long been considered as the hardest Freshman team in the country to beat. A victory over them, while not a certain fact by any means, is a possibility which means a great deal to Bellefonte, probably more than any other game played in recent years.

Caught a Speckled Beauty.

Charles B. Musser caught a speckled beauty on Monday evening at the junction of Spring Creek and Logan's branch. The trout measured 24 inches in length and weighed 6 pounds. It was very nicely speckled and the flesh was a deep red, similar to salmon, very thick and delicious. Mr. Musser has been fishing many evenings of the present season and estimates his total catch as being in the neighborhood of 75, fish that ranged mostly from 10 to 16 inches in length. The head and tail of the big fellow, were on exhibition Tuesday at the Olewine hardware store, where Mr. Musser is a clerk.

Carnival Cancelled.

Through efforts of Chautauqua boosters, the Harder Majestic shows carnival, scheduled to come here this week, was forbidden and cancelled their arrangements. Chautauqua will be the attraction next week and it was considered as deserving of more consideration, the dates having been arranged in advance, so that it was an inopportune time to book or permit another attraction to exhibit here.

GARMAN PROPERTY SOLD FOR CHEVROLET GARAGE

Decker Brothers Get Fine Business Corner for $22,500.

DEAL CLOSED MONDAY

The splendid business property at the corner of High and Spring Sts., the Garman homestead property, was purchased on Monday by Decker Brothers—C. G. and T. J. Decker—Penn's valley auto dealers who have branches established at Spring Mills, State College and Water St., Bellefonte.

The business done since the firm purchased the "Big Spring" garage, under the bustling management of J. C. Houck, has even passed their expectations and they had been looking for a better site for some time. Among the places considered were the historic Valentine property, on the opposite corner from the Garman property, and the Davis property on Bishop St. According to the terms of sale, nothing much can be done with the dwelling property before April 1st, 1924, tenants holding leases until then. However, present plans are to start work very soon in erecting a garage building on the unoccupied portion of the lot on Spring St. Whether it will be of one or more stories has not been decided. Then, next spring, the first floor of the building will be remodeled so that eventually all of the first floor will be occupied for garage and storage purposes, the immediate corner on Spring and High to be used as a modern display room.

The Bellefonte branch of Decker Brothers, under the management of Mr. Houck, is well over the half million dollar mark in business up to this time and it is expected to do a business this season of over $1,000,000. This indicates the tremendous buying of automobiles in Centre County this year. Four carloads of new autos were received this week for distribution, one being sent to the State College branch, the others being used locally.

TWO NEW AUTO LAWS

Every Driver Must Have Special License; Every Car a Title.

Two new auto laws that every owner and driver of a car must become familiar with are now attracting considerable attention. The state highway department will soon be mailing application blanks to owners.

The one law requires that every new driver of a car must have a special driver's license which is granted only after required examination has been passed. The license to operate a car will not include authority to drive it, the latter being given only by the special driver's license which must be renewed each year. This special license will cost $1. After Nov. 24, 1923, it will be illegal to own or operate a motor car without a certificate of title. It will not be possible to secure 1924 license tags without it. The title is somewhat similar to a title for real estate and does not need to be renewed unless ownership of the car is transferred.

Slump—Waite.

Miss Marion E. Waite, one of our well known Coleville girls, an operator in the Bell exchange here and more recently in Altoona, became the bride of Harold Slump, of Easton, on Saturday, being married at the Reformed parsonage in Easton, by the pastor, Rev. Meek. The groom is employed in Pittsburgh. They have the best wishes of "The Republican" and a host of friends.

Two Big Festivals.

One of the big festivals of the year will be held at Axe Mann this Saturday evening and another at Howard. That at Axe Mann is to raise funds for the church, while at Howard the benefit is for community betterment, under the auspices of the Civic club. Nice weather will assure a big crowd and a good time at both places.

Operators Changed.

Charles W. Miller, for several years in charge of the N. Y. C. R. R. station at Orvinton, has been transferred and will work the truck as telegraph operator at Beech Creek station from midnight until 8 A. M. Harry W. Packer, formerly at Beech Creek, is transferred to Monmouth.

Bought Snow Shoe Shop.

The barber shop at Snow Shoe, formerly conducted by the late John Herr, has been purchased by O. B. Clapper, who took charge this week.

QUARRYMEN CAUGHT BY PREMATURE EXPLOSION

Dynamite Discharge at Chemical Plant Injured Two Workmen.

TAKEN TO SPECIALIST

Walter Cethart and George Anderson, both residing nearby Bellefonte, were victims of haste on Saturday, being caught in a shower of stone and dirt when 15 sticks of dynamite let go prematurely after being placed in a newly drilled hole. Many small stones pelted the quarrymen in the face and about their bodies. They were taken to Philadelphia immediately by Robert Walker, one of the company officials, to be under care of Dr. Sweet, a noted eye specialist.

Both the men were working at the same operation. The hole had been drilled to hold even more dynamite and fellow workmen expected to find both killed by the explosion, which shook the quarry. In a way, it was fortunate the discharge came at the time it did, instead of later when more dynamite would have undoubtedly caused a distressing tragedy.

The hole was drilled and "squibbed" once. Instead of using the customary safeguard to ascertain if the hole was cool enough to place the dynamite—that of placing a three quarter inch pipe in it and forcing air through it with the compressor—the men put a stick down in it and felt the end, considering it cool enough to proceed. As the dynamite let go while the men were in the act of adding more to it, the explosion caught them entirely unexpectedly and in front, much of the stone and dirt striking them in the face.

The men were very painfully injured and Cethart's right arm was also much bruised and cut but it is believed that it will not be necessary to amputate it. In fact, the clothing of both men was cut by the sharp edges of stone and they were very badly bruised. Cethart has been employed at the quarries for some time and was considered a skilled workman.

CAR WRECKED ON TURN

Mrs. Sheldon Haines, Formerly of Bellefonte, Seriously Injured.

Sheldon Haines, wife and two children, accompanied by a young man who was driving their Ford coupe, had their vacation trip marred by a rather serious accident which occurred on Sunday afternoon at 1 o'clock when the driver lost control at the very sharp curve east of Pine Grove Mills, just at the approach to what is familiarly termed "the long hill" on the state road leading to State College and Bellefonte.

The car skidded as the turn was made and would likely have made several somersaults had it not been that another big car, a limousine, with a Mr. Robertson, of Letrobie, and party, was approaching and the coupe struck the rear end of it. The limousine was somewhat damaged and the coupe wrecked.

Mrs. Haines had both collar bones fractured, while Mr. Haines and the two children escaped. The driver was also painfully bruised and taken to the Bellefonte hospital, where Mrs. Haines has also been a patient. As the children are small, one 2 years old and the other a babe about 6 months old, it complicated affairs for Mr. Haines, but he is glad the mishap did not result even more seriously.

The misfortune came while the Haines family was enroute to Wilkes Barre, their parental home where they planned to spend their two weeks vacation. Mr. Haines is employed by the Faller Brush Co. and located near Ridgway. When in Bellefonte, he resigned as manager of the Western Union Telegraph office to become agent for the Faller brushes.

Traffic Delayed on the B. E. V.

Traffic on the Tyrone Division of the Pennsylvania railroad, in Bald Eagle valley, was delayed for several hours on Monday about noon when one truck of a freight car, part of a train, was derailed as the train was between Unionville and Julian. A wrecking crew from Tyrone soon had the truck and car back on the rails and traffic was resumed.

A Delightful Band Concert.

A concert of the Boys band from the Loyseville Orphans' home, a Lutheran institution, held in Bellefonte on Sunday evening, was largely attended and generally approved as one of the most delightful concerts ever given here. An offering was lifted and the Boys' band treasury was increased just $164.

CONSIDERS NUISANCES

Ordinance to Have Them Abolished Before Council.

Nuisances—wash water in gutters in stagnant condition, unsightly ash heaps, odoriferous pig pens, anything that menaces the health of our citizens or is undesirable to residents—must be abolished in Bellefonte. That is the sentiment that has finally led to putting before the nuisance committee for consideration an ordinance presented at the regular meeting of Council on Monday evening by John Love, secretary of the local board of health. In discussing the ordinance, it was pointed out that some persons have refused to heed the pleas, even the threats of punishment of authorities, and the passing of the proposed measure would make it possible to really punish the offenders, procedure of which has been delayed because no legislation exists to cover the situation.

Mr. Love also presented an ordinance to regulate health of employees of eating places and regarding use of sanitary cups at soda fountains. This ordinance was also referred to the nuisance committee.

Charles Schad was present and asked that Council have the street opened between Spring and Allegheny, extending Beaver St. This, Mr. Schad said, was important inasmuch as there are several persons who contemplate building on lots, known as the Schad lots. The matter was referred to the street committee.

Charles Garbrick asked that Council consider proper sewage on Willowbank and Water Sts. He explained that during the recent heavy rains, the sewer on Water St. clogged and his shop was flooded. At his residence on Willowbank St., workmen who did some concreting at the bridge over the race, closed the end of the sewer and this caused a flood of water to run over the corner of his property, cutting away a part of his lawn. The matter was referred to the street committee.

Garbage disposal considered and Council discussed an offer to have a man stop at each residence once a week and gather garbage and refuse to be hauled to the dumping ground near Fannings. It was said persons could secure this service for possibly 50 cents per week if enough desired. It was referred to the street committee.

BOOST PENNSYLVANIA WHEAT

Millers Organize at Meeting in Muncy; Will Advertise.

Among the millers from Centre County who attended the meeting in Muncy last Wednesday evening were C. V. Wagner and several guests; K. W. Bashor and A. K. Uish, of Bellefonte; Mr. Fetterhoff, of Spring Mills; and W. J. McMullin, of Millheim. It was decided to organize a separate body of millers from Centre, Lehigh and Clinton counties to be known as the Tri-County association and to be effected at a meeting to be held in the near future. The purpose is to boost Pennsylvania wheat.

The meeting at Muncy was that of the Susquehanna association with headquarters at Bloomsburg. Ninety-eight farmers, millers, bakers and their wives were present. B. W. Dedrick and H. B. Musser, of the Pennsylvania State College, were among the guests.

The subject of advertising in county newspapers was discussed favorably and plans were formulated to advertise and place before the public some real facts about the Pennsylvania wheat and the quality of bread which can be made from Pennsylvania wheat flour. An assessment was levied on each miller present to defray advertising expenses.

For the benefit of the bakers who were present, Mr. Stuart displayed two loaves of bread, one baked by the new "No Time Dough Process," and the other by the old long time dough process. The two loaves also afforded a comparison between a loaf made of 100 per cent Western wheat flour and one made from 50 per cent Pennsylvania flour. The loaf volume, the texture, the taste and the color could not be differentiated, showing that wheat flour from Pennsylvania bakes fully as well as Western wheat flour and that the "No Time Dough Process" is about assured to the bakers as making bread of as high a quality as by the old time process.

Geo. Rhoades Lowest Bidder.

George Rhoades, of Coleville, had the lowest bid submitted to the County Commissioners and the Supervisors of Boggs Twp. for building the concrete abutment and wing walls for the bridge to span Bald Eagle creek at Snow Shoe intersection when the bids were opened the past week for consideration. No award was made at the time but it is likely Mr. Rhoades will be given the contract on Tuesday.

FIRE AT STATE COLLEGE DESTROYED 3 HOUSES

Firemen Did Good Work and Kept Loss at Minimum.

LOSS PARTLY INSURED

Fire at noon yesterday damaged three houses on Pugh street at State College, causing a heavy loss partly covered by insurance. The State College firemen did good work and kept the loss at a minimum.

The flames started in the Bert Meek house, occupied by Rev. H. F. Babcock, and family. When discovered, it had made considerable headway. It is believed a defective flue was the cause. The residence was practically destroyed and some household goods were burned. Many articles were carried to safety, however. It is understood the house will be rebuilt.

The flames spread to other nearby houses, causing small damage to a double house on the side occupied by John Allen. More damage was caused at the frame house occupied by Thomas M. Fishburn. The roof was just about burned and the attic destroyed. Mr. Fishburn said, "The water also ran down through the house and over everything, causing me more damage even than the fire. I will rebuild."

The blaze started about 11:30 and it was 1 o'clock before it was finally extinguished. Being in a thickly settled part of the town, the spread of the flames was feared and many neighbors gathered, assisting in fighting the blaze.

POTATO GROWERS TRIP

Will Inspect Several Patches and Have Picnic Lunch.

Potato growers of Centre county are planning to "strike" on July 26th, and join with farmers of ten other counties in an auto tour and potato field day. The trip will include stops at representative fields of spuds in Blair, Centre and Huntingdon counties. A basket lunch in a shady nook, and will wind up with an inspection of the potato fields at the Penna. State College.

The delegation will gather at the John B. Campbell farm, two miles east of Tyrone at nine o'clock. Here, a potato and alfalfa rotation will be viewed. Pleasant View stock farm is the next stop where the results of using acid phosphate fertilizer will be seen. The famous "hog & potato" two year rotation will claim the attention of the group at the Milo Campbell farm near Baileyville. Campbell uses the rotation scheme of ten acres of spuds followed by ten acres of porker.

By noon the party is expected to arrive at the farm of A. C. Kepler, of Pine Grove Mills. Thirty acres of potatoes, the largest acreage in central Penna. is the attraction. Basket lunch, with plenty of shade and spring water, will halt the tourists for a short time in the Kepler grove.

The tour will wind up at the College farms where seed source tests, variety tests and other experimental work of interest to every potato grower will be inspected and explained by E. L. Nixon, the "potato wizard" of Penna. Reports indicate that large delegations will come from Mifflin, Union and Bedford counties, and auto loads are expected from Fayette, Jefferson and Clinton.

Every member of the Centre County potato club should plan for this day. Business men who are sponsoring the potato club boys will take this opportunity to learn something about potato growing and to get better acquainted with the boys.

Legs Cut by Reaper.

George Furst, a young farmer of Mackeyville, sustained very severe cuts on both legs when he stepped in front of a mowing machine on Monday morning. His right leg was cut entirely through the big bone. The left leg was cut to the bone. He was taken to his home and given prompt medical attention and hope for saving his limbs was expressed.

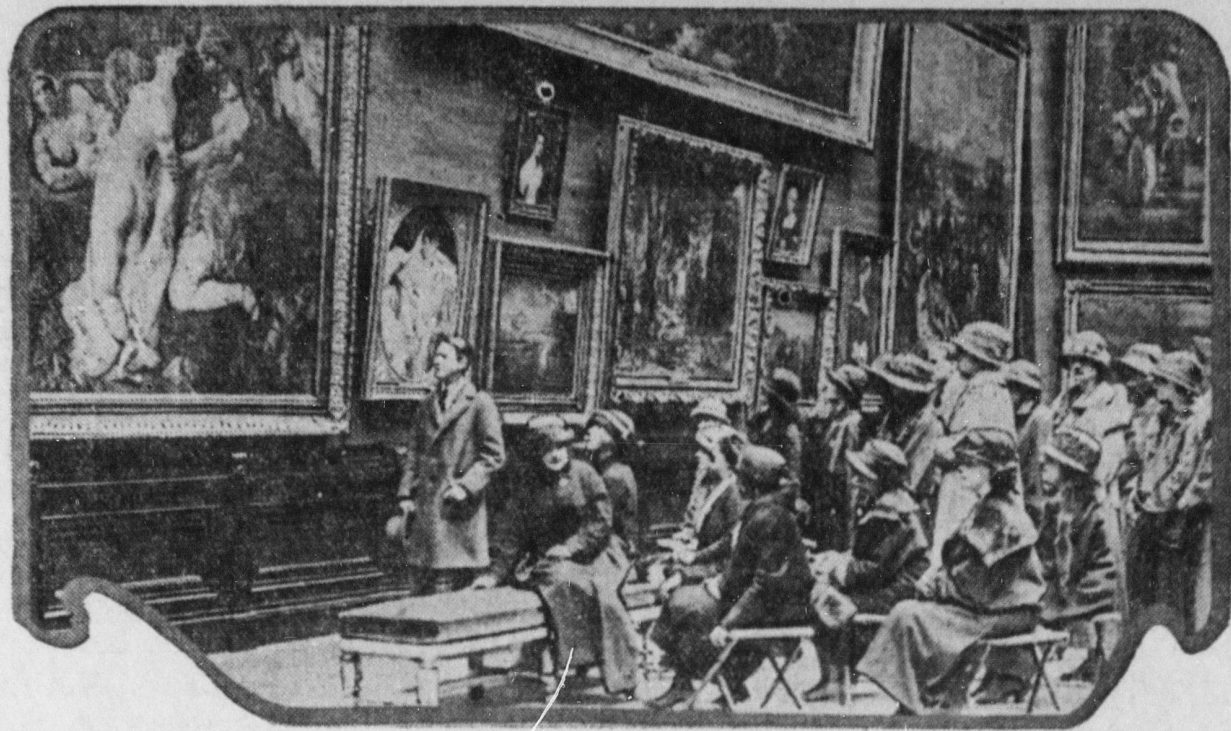

Injured by Revolver Shot.

Donald U. Gettig, of Bellefonte, was painfully but fortunately not seriously injured on Tuesday evening when he was accidentally shot by a .45 bullet from a revolver. The bullet passed through the flesh of his right leg, just missing the bone.

Bankrupt Stock Sold.

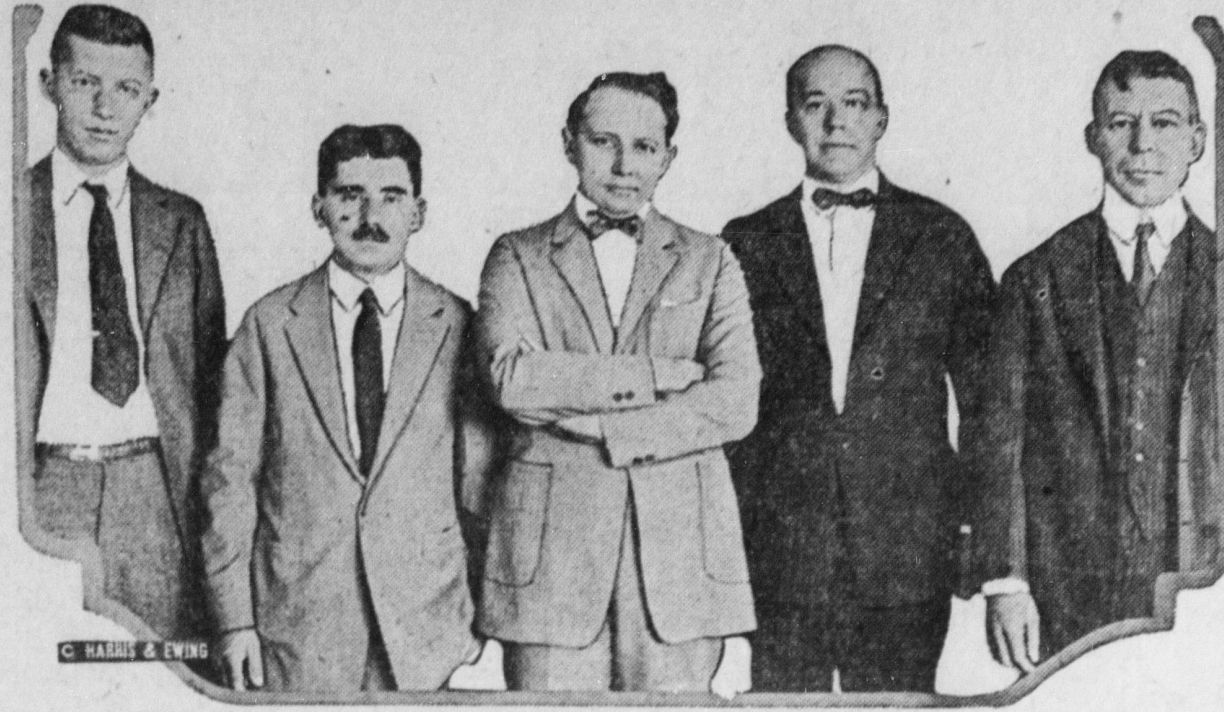

The stock merchandise of Henry Spangler, of Blanchard, was sold at auction on Saturday afternoon, the purchaser being O. J. Stover, also of Blanchard, whose bid was $400.

IN PRISON, BUT HONORED

A year ago R. V. Bray, Jr., of Beaufort, S. C., was fined $1,000 and sentenced to serve a year in the Atlanta federal penitentiary for striking an inspector of internal revenue. Bray offered for defense the fact that the federal officer had intimated that he was a liar. Just to show what his townspeople thought of the affair they elected him mayor in the last election. Recently he surrendered himself to the United States marshal and started his sentence. He performs his mayoral duties in his cell.

PRETTY DANCER ELOPES

Fearing that a London trip might delay their marriage, Charles F. "SPIRIT OF MUSIC"

Here is the clay model by Albin Polasek, well-known sculptor, which is to be cast in bronze to adorn Michigan avenue in Chicago. It is called the "Spirit of Music." The statue is sixteen feet high and will be placed on a granite platform five feet high. Polasek thinks music a sexless art and for this reason he has combined in his statue the strength of the male and the beauty and grace of the female form.

Curious Use for Ice.

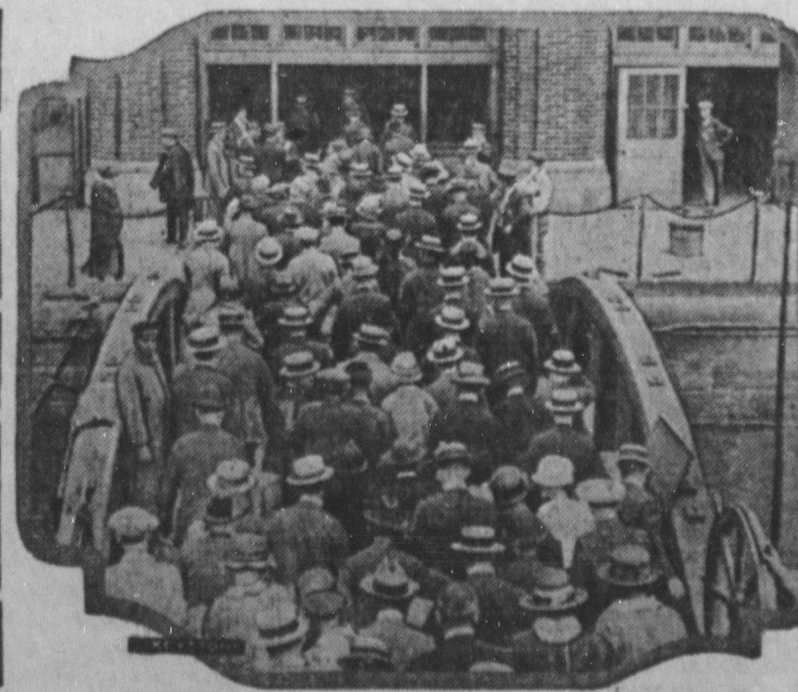

Up to the present it has been possible to leave only small cavities in concrete, but a big advance has been brought about by a new foreign method. Pieces of ice that correspond to the measurements of the cavity required are embedded in the concrete mass, and small channels are left to allow the water to run off when the ice melts. The process is of particular advantage in reinforcing concrete with iron. The iron parts are not built in during the stamping, but are attached to the blocks of ice before the work is begun. The repeated moistening usually necessary in concrete work is not required in this process, for the melting of the ice makes up the loss by evaporation.

Celebrating Green River Day

Starting with a picnic of the overland trail, in which pioneers, trappers and pony express riders took part, the "Green River Day" celebration at Green River, Wyo., finished with a good old-fashioned western barbecue. This photograph shows "Doc" Frye, famous cook, making coffee for 5,000 assembled ranchers, shippers and railroaders.

Immigrants Thronging Into America

Already the new quotas of immigrants have been filled in the case of most foreign countries, and many will have to return to their native lands. Here are a lot of fortunate ones who have passed the examination at Ellis island and are going ashore at the Battery, New York.

"I'm forty years old, but she treated me like a boy. She nagged me all my life. I killed her, and I'm satisfied with my fate," said Julius Kessler in court at Buffalo, N. Y.

Kessler was sentenced to die after he confessed shooting his sixty-year-old stepmother, Mrs. Pauline Kessler.

"She abused me if I didn't get home from work on time. She flew in a rage when I wouldn't scrub the floors. Then she threatened to have me arrested, and I rebelled," Kessler explained.

HALF WILD CHILDREN FLEE FROM FIRST "MOVIE" TRAIN

Spectacle of Express Rushing at Them Across Screen Sends Them Scurrying

Glasgow, Scotland.—The first movie show ever witnessed by peasant children on the lonely island of St. Kilda, west of Scotland, so terrified them that they stampeded from the school-room.

The film was being exhibited in the school, but the exhibition was held up when the room was vacated so abruptly. The children sought safety on the hillsides.

St. Kilda, isolated during several months of the year by the stormy Atlantic, is inhabited by a semi-civilized people. A party of visitors, thinking to give the natives a treat, arranged a moving picture entertainment.

The young folks were out in full force despite the warning of their elders. The audience sat unmoved, through a picture of a football match and their hosts were elated at their spellbound interest.

Then an express train rushed at the audience across the screen, and the youngsters screamed and fled. They ignored the assurances of the operator that the train was not real, so the performance was called off.

Pet Hen and Mistress Buried in Same Coffin

Washington.—The true story of how a pet hen recently was buried in the same coffin in nearby Virginia with the body of a woman who owned the fowl came to light when one of the eyewitnesses related the circumstances in Washington recently.

A few days before the woman's death she requested that her pet hen be chloroformed and buried in the same casket with her. Having respect for the woman's request, although it was admittedly odd and unusual, friends procured a quantity of chloroform and administered the poison in the usual manner at the same time placing the hen in a box, where it was to be kept until the day of the funeral.

The following morning, however, it was found the poison had no effect on the egg-layer and another dose was administered with no better results. Finally the day of the funeral arrived, and the undertaker said he could "turn the trick" in short order, so accordingly administered some formaldehyde. But even at that the hen did not go to her eternal scratching ground.

How to comply with the woman's request was becoming quite baffling, and as relatives and friends were gathering for the last rites the undertaker solemnly carried the hen to the woodhouse, where the hen was prepared for its last sleep by chopping off its head with an ax.

Vet With Broken Neck Boasts as "Luckiest Man"

San Antonio, Tex.—His neck broken by a dive into the municipal pool at San Pedro park, yet alive, the broken vertebrae held firmly in a plaster cast, R. L. ("Jack") Perry, thirty-three-year-old World War veteran, has decided that he is the luckiest man in the world.

Jerry served in the World War with the sixty-sixth infantry, Rainbow division. He was gassed three times and wounded seven times during the war and now is on the government disabled list, drawing compensation.

Coming to San Antonio for the benefit of his lungs, which were weakened by the gassing, Perry was run over by an automobile soon after his arrival. His left leg was fractured above the knee.

Not quite a year ago he was working at Camp Travis on some construction when a steel girder fell, striking Perry a glancing blow, but with sufficient force to fracture his left arm.

On Christmas day, 1922, the house of a neighbor on West Salinas street caught fire and while waiting for the department to arrive Perry climbed on the roof and aided in pouring water on the flames. The dense smoke was too much for his lungs, weakened by gas, and he was overcome. Falling from the roof, he was badly knocked out for a time.

Kills Father for Attack on Wife.

Goldsboro, N. C.—Pleading that he killed his father because the latter attacked his daughter-in-law, Dewey Smith is on trial for his life. Smith declared that his father attacked Mrs. Smith, only a young woman, four times. The father is seventy years of age.

Knitted Drop-Stitch Jacquette;

Variety in Summer Wrap Styles

NOW comes the midsummer time of the year when the chief concern of milady is to acquire "something cool to wear," yet, withal, up to the mark in fashion. This desire to play up to the weather is most satisfactorily realized in knit fiber silk, It is safe to prophesy that were a motion to be put acclimating knit fiber silk frocks, blouses, sweaters and the like, as ideal for summer wear, a mighty chorus of "aye, ayes" would mount throughout fashiondom.

In this age of knitted outerwear tr-

description. They look like a shimmering cobweb of zephyr-weight wool, bordered with a rainbow of colors. Adorable are they over lingerie frocks and the latest is to wear these lovely colorful throws over the strictly plain knit white mohair or jersey slipovers.

Present styles in summer wraps are presented in such a variety of materials and in so many different models that it is impossible to designate any particular type as being the fashion. Two things, however, umph, skilled artificers have sought out many inventions, not the least of which is the drop-stitch. This season witnesses the styling of phantom-weight garments, knit in open-work stitch, which produces a coveted sheerness and laciness. The effective little jacquette shown in the picture tells the story of this achievement. Navy blue fiber silk has been employed as the medium for this summer-weight fantasy. Its intention for warm weather wear is accentuated in the novel zig-zag stitch alternated with an open drop-stitch. Note the stylish tight sleeves and turnback cuffs.

If any of the new colors such as saxe blue, wheat shade, gray or Lan-characterize the garments of recent appearance. These are their length and their straight lines. No matter what material or color is used, if a model conforms to the general rule as to length and line, it may be worn with the assurance that it is in good style.

For dressy affairs, another whimsical development of late summer styles has been the return to favor of the old-fashioned Spanish or cashmere shawl. The fortunate woman who possesses one of these treasures may have it adapted to the present mode and so add a colorful and charming garment to her summer wardrobe.

vin green of cocoa. If one seeks a conservative suit tone, this garment is eminently acceptably worn, as it should be, with a plaited skirt. Developed all of pure white, the acme of midsummer perfection is reached for "everybody" dresses in white this season, even to shoes, chapeau and attending accessories.

The surprise mode in the knitted over-blouse is quite the proper thing. Its rolling collar, open to the waist, presents a fascinating glimpse of an exquisitely refined lace vestee—and oh! joy of joys, be sure in your meanderings throughout the knitted sports wear department to ask for the new zephyr knit rainbow scarfs. Their loveliness exceeds power of characteristic of their kind. At the right is a graceful cape of soft wool with a rich collar of blue fox. Two knitted silk fringe tassels relieve the long line at the back and add the finishing touch to the garment.

Modern Shebas will find delight in the wild coloring of the Egyptian embroidery which ornaments the coat at the left. The same influence is also evident in the tube-like lines of the coat and the flaring sleeve. The collar is plain and a wide moire ribbon is used for the sole fastening.

BANDIT FLEES PIE BARRAGE

It Was Not for Nothing That Mrs. Warner Had Watched the Movie Comedies.

NO TIME FOR SHOOTING

Chicago.—It was Sunday afternoon and there was a lull in the stream of customers that came to Mrs. Mary Warner's bakery. Mrs. Warner herself, glad of the respite—"At fifty I am not so young as I was," she would say—sat down and comfortably surveyed a row of newly baked strawberry pies that lay cooling on the counter ere they decorated her shelves. A shadow fell across the pies and dispelled her musings. She looked up. In the doorway stood a tall and ugly man, his hands deep in his coat pockets.

"Yes?" queried Mrs. Warner politely as the man came slowly toward her. "What can I do for you?"

Both Hands Full. For answer the man pulled out his hands, a revolver in each. Mrs. Warner saw them and began to think, think more quickly than she had ever done in her life. An idea came. With her sweetest smile she moved quietly toward the pies, apparently unconscious of the revolvers.

"You'd like some pie, I suppose?" she smiled on the bandit.

"I want what's in the till and I want it—" he began, then—splash!—and a perfectly new strawberry pie spread itself lovingly over his face.

Not for nothing had Mrs. Warner

As the First Pie Hit Him, He Dropped One Revolver.

watched Charlie Chaplin and his unerring skill with the custard pie. With a perfect action she flung pie after pie at the bandit till it was hard to tell which was which.

No Time for Shooting.

As the first pie hit him he dropped one revolver and tried to clear his eyes. As the second got there, down went the other revolver and he went after the work of excavation with both hands.

The third pie routed him and he fled for the door. Still pies followed him. In the joy of the moment Mrs. Warner did not care whether he was still there or not and until the pies gave out she decorated the door and the windows in artistic fashion.

When her ammunition failed her Mrs. Warner realized she had routed the enemy. Then, and not till then, did she call the Maxwell street police and tell them of the battle. When they arrived they gazed regretfully at the pastry debris.

"That's nothing," said Mrs. Warner proudly. "You should have seen that bandit. It was worth all the pies in the shop."

Nude Carpenter Nabbed After Bathtub Parade

San Mateo, Cal.—"Come up quick. September Morn is shingling a house!" This message from an excited householder brought Chief of Police Tom Burke on the run. He arrived to find R. H. Merritt, carpenter, wearing only a pair of gold-rimmed spectacles and a hammer, at work on a job for Oscar Oavanaugh, contractor.

"What's the idea of the bathtub parade?" demanded the chief.

"It's good for my health, and it's cool," replied Merritt, gambling around the ridge pole. "I always work raw."

"Well," said the chief, "you'll have to come down and be arrested."

"Oh, all right," said Merritt, "but I think it is an insult."

He was regarded and taken before Police Judge George Kertell. The court groaned.

"I don't know what to do with this man," he said. "He's perfectly sane, but he won't stay dressed."

"Why should I?" demanded Merritt. "I was born naked, wasn't I?"

The court is holding him for investigation. He was arrested three months ago in Burlingame for the same offense and fined $15. He molests nobody and is said to be a good carpenter. But he possesses a clothes complex and refuses to stay dressed. The police of two towns say he is the toughest "nut" they have ever had to crack.

THE PILL HOLD-UP

THIS actually happened and is well worth telling.

The drug clerk was just about to close up. It was getting late. The last policeman to rub his nose against the plate glass window, was far down the avenue when the clerk switched off the electric lights and turned the lock. Then it all happened.

A man rushed up to the door. "Say, man, I want a box of Beecham's Pills. Simply must have them!" he exclaimed. "Store's closed for the day," remarked the clerk as he pocketed the key. "Like thunder it is!" shouted the late comer, "I've got to have a box of Beecham's Pills tonight." The altercation grew heated. There was an exchange of blows.

Then the clerk took off his broken glasses, unlocked the door and handed out a 50 cent box of Beecham's Pills.

Can you beat it?

Beecham's Pills are so pleasantly effective in making sick stomachs well, sluggish livers active, and lazy bowels to function as they should, that Beecham's steady friends and supporters sometimes overdo with strenuous enthusiasm.

The other afternoon a young American rented an airplane at the Bourget field which he will utilize, he declares, to scatter handbills all over Paris, says Le Petit Parisien. A sample of these handbills reads as follows:

"An American, for the first time in Paris, would like to lunch at noon next Tuesday with the most interesting anarchist in the capital; Wednesday, with a graduate student of art or music; Thursday, with an actress; Friday, with some lady who intends to commit suicide, and Saturday, with a nobleman.

"In exchange for this entertainment he offers the luncheons, music and intelligent conversation."

The address of an American advertising agency follows, and then the name of this original visitor—Lionel P. Tompkins.

STUDENTS IN MINES

Many Young Women from Penn State Motored to Morrisdale.

About 160 students, many of them young ladies from State College, Saturday morning in trucks, buses and cars, visited the mining operations at Morrisdale, and getting first hand information on how coal is mined and brought to the surface.

Quotas of the visitors were taken into Cunard slope, where they saw the black faced boys who produce the stuff that makes the wheels of industry revolve.

Officials, superintendents and foremen of the operations escorted the visitors around and into the holes in the ground from which the black diamonds come. College professors, who understand the theoretical end of the mining industry, aided with the demonstration.

Between the college professors and the practical mining officials and miners, the students secured a lot of information, and it is a safe bet they will return to their studies with broadened ideas regarding mining.

OVER THE COUNTY

Claude Dutrow, of Centre Hall, was painfully but not seriously injured the other day while trying out a motor cycle. The critter fell and caused Dutrow to cut a deep gash on his left arm.

James Smith, of near Woodward, lost a very valuable horse on July 2nd. It was customary for him to let his team free for a short time to enjoy themselves. One, in making a dash toward the barn, fractured a leg and had to be shot.

W. D. Shoop, for fifteen years a clerk in the Eagle clothing store, in Bellefonte, spent the week of the 4th at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Shoop, in Centre Hall. His stay was not altogether a vacation, he being ill from pleurisy.

Dr. Henry Clay Campbell, of Philadelphia, sustained a double fracture of his right leg while visiting at the farm of his brother, Robert P., of Penns Cave. Dr. Campbell was riding to the field on a hay wagon when he fell off, one of the wheels passing over his leg.

While mowing grass recently four weasels were caught by S. G. Walker, on his farm, west of Spring Mills. The weasels were busily engaged in devouring a field mouse and did not heed the approach of the team and mower, so that they were caught in the sharp knives.

Samuel Ripka, of near Millheim, was very painfully injured one day recently when struck several inches above the knee by a hay fork, which penetrated the bone in such a manner that three men had to assist in drawing out the fork. Mr. Ripka was seated on a load of hay which was being taken into the barn. One of the logs in the overhead mow caught the fork and threw it, so that it caught Mr. Ripka.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. I. A. Sweetwood, of Centre Hall, was the scene of a family reunion over the Fourth. Their daughters, Mrs. Fay Brumhall, Misses Carrie and Elizabeth, were home for a vacation. Mr. and Mrs. Brumhall motored from Metuchen, N. J., on a motor-cycle. Mr. Brumhall is a Penn State graduate and is holding down a good position in New York city with the Western Union Telegraph Company as an electrical engineer. Miss Carrie is a trained nurse with headquarters at Philadelphia and plans to remain with her parents for the month. Miss Elizabeth holds a clerical position in the Mechanics bank in Trenton, N. J., and was here for a two weeks vacation.

Centre County Baseball League.

Last Thursday, Centre Hall was defeated by State College, the score being 6-5. Bellefonte defeated Millheim, 8-2. On Saturday, State College played a double-header with Millheim, the scores being 1-3 and 7-4. Millheim winning the first game and losing the second. Bellefonte lost at Centre Hall, 7-4.

WOMAN CIVIL WAR VETERAN

Romantic Story of Milesburg Resident is Narrated.

Col. Thomas W. Lloyd, in the Williamsport Gazette and Bulletin pens the following stirring history of Mrs. Samuel Simcox, living on Little Plum run, who was with her husband in the army of the Potomac:

In a modest little farm house, situated on Little Plum run in Clinton county, surrounded by vines and flowers, lives a sweet-faced old lady, now in her 83rd year, Mrs. Samuel Simcox by name. In the company of kind and loving friends she is passing her declining years in peace and quiet and to look upon the gentle, refined face one would naturally suppose that she had passed her entire life amid such a peaceful environment and had seen little of the exciting activities of a strenuous world.

And yet, in the days of her youth, Mrs. Simcox was part and parcel of some of the most stirring events in her country's history.

The curtain rises on our little story on the railroad station platform at Milesburg, in Centre county, in the fall of 1861.

A troop train is loading with soldiers going off for a three-year term in the Union army. A young wife, of 22 years, stands beside her stalwart husband bidding him a sad but fond farewell. As he leans from the car door, looking back at the young wife, she waves a last good bye with tear-filled eyes. The train passes out of her range of vision and she returns to her prosaic duties at the home. The woman was Mrs. Samuel Simcox, then Mrs. Abram Boyer.

The scene shifts. Mrs. Boyer was not content. Her thoughts were constantly with her soldier husband and every day the daily routine of household work became more irksome. She pondered long over the situation and then came a high resolve. She would go to her husband and follow him, even if it took her up to the cannon's mouth.

The resolve was quickly put into execution. She secured transportation from the state and proceeded to Harrisburg where she joined her husband, who was then stationed at Camp Curtin, awaiting orders to go to the front.

From that time on Mrs. Boyer became a part of the Army of the Potomac and followed her husband throughout his entire war service until his capture before Petersburg from whence he was sent to Andersonville prison, where he died. She subsequently married Samuel Simcox, whose name she still bears.

Mrs. Boyer provided herself with a short dress reaching to her ankles, made of red, white and blue materials of a serviceable nature. Her shoes were decorated with two gold stars and of these she was very proud. She wore a regulation army cap with the insignia of the organization to which her husband belonged, Company A, 45th regiment, 9th corps, Pennsylvania Volunteers. Thus equipped, she became a part of Uncle Sam's army and continued with it until the close of the war. She made friends with officers and soldiers alike and was permitted to come and go as she pleased.

She usually accompanied the baggage wagons, messes with the soldiers and slept on a pile of feed bags or any comfortable, or uncomfortable, place she could find. In winter, when the army went into winter quarters, she usually returned home.

She served in the hospitals and on the field as a volunteer nurse and rendered whatever aid she could in every way possible for an unattached woman. When a battle was on she crawled up as close to the front as possible and became a part of every engagement. She was present at several of the most severe of these, including Antietam and Gettysburg. At the latter place she was compelled to step over dead horses and dead men and wade over her shoe soles in blood to get to her husband. All the service she rendered to the soldiers was entirely gratuitous, for which she never received any pay. She became a great favorite with the officers and they extended to her every privilege and courtesy which they were able to grant.

She followed her husband through the peninsular campaign and on to the final wind-up at Petersburg.

It was just before the Petersburg campaign, while at Fortress Monroe, that the calamitous incident of her army career occurred. One day she was approached by a short, stocky officer of infantry wearing on his shoulders the three-star designation of a lieutenant general of the armies of the United States. He bore in his arms a bundle and, approaching Mrs. Boyer, he handed it to her. Upon opening it, the contents proved to be a new uniform, a replica of the one she had been wearing. It was composed entirely of silk and was a beautiful garment. When she reappeared, after having retired to don the new uniform, the officer called for three cheers from those standing by which were given with a will. She then received the personal congratulations of the officers and soldiers and learned the officer who had given her the uniform was General Ulysses S. Grant, commander in chief of all the armies.

Mrs. Boyer during her army career became very expert in handling a musket and could go through the bayonet drill without making a break. She could handle the gun as though it were a plaything.

It is to be regretted that Mrs. Simcox's uniform was not preserved for future generations to see, but she unfortunately allowed her children to cut it into pieces as souvenirs.

Mrs. Simcox's mind is clear and she possesses a remarkable memory. When telling of her experience she is able to go into details and give days and dates with an accuracy that is wonderful. She has no hesitation in telling the story of her army career and does it with a lucidity that is marvelous.

She is one of the survivors of a stirring age and her career is probably unique in the history of the great Civil war.

Dry Weather Affected Crops.

A month ago farmers were hoping for some wet weather to boost crops and make them good, but their anticipations were in vain and the continued dry weather is blamed for crops that are below normal. Oats is still promising, while corn and potatoes look good. State reports just received indicate the hay crop in the state is the smallest in years; corn a little less than last year; wheat, 14% less; oats, 20% decrease; potatoes, 22% less. The state report on fruit was for an increased apple crop; a bumper crop of peaches, pears and grapes.

Face Cut in Collision.

Samuel Badinger, of Snow Shoe, collided with a car driven by Harry F. Stevenson, of Mill Hall, last Thursday evening on a spot near that town where 15 minutes previously a truck had collided with a motorcycle. Mrs. Stevenson had her nose nearly cut off and sustained a severe laceration of the forehead. Both cars were damaged.

Pine Grove Mills.

The Baileyville annual picnic is billed for Aug. 18. Post date in your "Katy." Rev. and Mrs. J. W. McAlarney visited old neighbors and friends at Hollidaysburg the beginning of the week.

Charley Stover, of Millheim, the hustling agent for the International Harvester Co., was here last Friday and delivered a gang plow to S. A. Homan, at Baileyville.

Mr. Shank, of Stoyestown, a former parishioner of Rev. J. E. English, spent the Sabbath at the parsonage on Main St.

During the electric storm that passed over this section on Tuesday afternoon, the Judy residence was struck by lightning, doing some damage. Mrs. Judy and daughter were alone and both were stunned and still unconscious when Mr. Judy returned home at 5 o'clock. The building is known as the Judge McWilliams home near Baileyville.

A toboggan slide has been installed at Bills Inn in the Grove near town. It is a great amusement for the kids.

Farmer J. H. Bailey, while hauling hay recently was jolted from the load, landing on the ground and fracturing several staves.

Comrade David W. Miller, while driving a hayrack, got a jolt that threw him violently to the ground, causing some ugly bruises.

While running a grain binder close to the public road on Friday, his four in-hand mule team took fright at a passing automobile and like a flash was in the jump and J. D. Drebbelius landed on the canvas and next on the ground. The breaking of the pitman rod stopped the critter. The machine was but slightly damaged, although John had a lame back for several days.

Mrs. Lillie King McCormick, of Clearfield, accompanied by her daughter, are visiting with the Ward sisters at the Ward home this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Livingston, of Pittsburgh, were Sunday visitors in our town greeting old friends of long ago. From here, they crossed old Tussey mountain to Stone valley, to visit folks in his native home.

Charles Parsons and Harry Sunday met in a head-on collision on Tadpole road on Saturday morning. The Sunday car was wrecked and his little daughter received a gash on her cheek and a piece of glass got in her ear. Besides being a dangerous curve, overhanging brush on the east side of the road tends to make it worse.

Sunday afternoon a Ford car, driven at a rapid rate, lost a front wheel and turned a flipper at the Kustaborder curve. The occupants got only a shaking up.

John F. Garner and daughter Julia motored over from State College to spend Monday evening with old friends and neighbors.

Mrs. Lydia Resides, Mrs. William Spotts and Mrs. John Garner, all of State College, and sisters, attended the funeral of their brother-in-law, Gerrett Smith, who died at his home in Camden, N. J., last Friday, quite suddenly, aged about 50 years. Burial was made on Tuesday morning.

Charles Goss, a trusted employee of the Pennay, with his wife, spent Sunday with his mother, Mrs. A. F. Goss, on West Main St., and found her very much improved in health.

The public road leading from here across old Tussey mountain to Stone valley, is being put in fine shape for travel.

Axe Mann.

There will be a big festival at Axe Mann on Saturday evening for the benefit of the church. Everybody is urged to come and help along with a good cause.

Mrs. Kathryn Yearick and sister, Mrs. Adaline McCartney, of Burnham, visited friends here this week.

Miss Marie Womer is visiting friends in Fillmore this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Proudfoot, of McKees Rocks, are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gross.

Mrs. Arthur Sunday visited this week among friends in Centre Hall.

Mrs. Agnes Osman and Mrs. S. J. Shunk, of Spring Mills, visited their sister, Mrs. Clinton Markle, on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Woomer spent last Sunday in Huntingdon and attended the United Brethren church where Rev. Geo. E. Smith, formerly of Bellefonte, is the pastor.

L. A. Hile has been on the sick list, but is some better at this writing.

A son arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Miller on Monday morning. Paul is smoking 50 cent cigars and thinking of retiring since he has a son.

Oak Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Reish, Mary and Kenneth Shuey, of Pleasant Gap, and Mrs. Roy Reish, of Altoona, spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Reish.

Mr. and Mrs. Ward Gramley, of Altoona, were recent visitors at the home of his sister, Mrs. R. C. Lowder.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Zong and son Glenn, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Zong and family, spent Sunday at the Raymond camp at Reitz's Gap.

A. C. Peters broke an axle on his car Saturday night.

Wayne Rishel is assisting Luther Peters at Fairbrook, hauling in wheat.

Mrs. F. P. Blair Dead.

Mrs. F. P. Blair, wife of one of our well known jewelers, died at the home on Springstreet on Friday morning after an illness extending over a year, death being due directly to a hemorrhage of the brain. The deceased was a native of Chester, Pa., where she was born August 29, 1849, coming to Bellefonte when a young woman, however, and residing here since that time. She and Mr. Blair were married in 1875 and started housekeeping in the house where she died. They lived in the same home all their married life excepting for about ten years, which was spent in the pretty home on Willowbank street, owned by Mr. Blair and destroyed when the foundry was burned years ago. Mrs. Blair's maiden name was Mary Entwistle. She was a remarkable woman, having an active disposition, taking special interest in church work and anything pertaining to the welfare of the community, including civic affairs. During her entire lifetime she was active in the affairs of the Episcopal church of which she was a member. Surviving are three sons: Frederick, of Seattle, Wash., whom Mr. and Mrs. Blair visited in 1921; Dr. Albert H. Blair, of Carwensville; and Russell, of Bellefonte; four brothers: Edward V., chief engineer of the Lorain Steel Company, of Johnstown; Albert B. head of the woodworking department of the West Philadelphia manual training high school; H. B., head of the mechanical department of the same school; F. L., of New York; and one sister, Mrs. Fussell, widow of the late Dr. M. Howard Fussell, of the University of Pennsylvania. Funeral services were held from the home at 1 o'clock on Monday afternoon and continued in the Episcopal church, the rector, Rev. M. DePal Maynard, having charge. Members of the church vestry were the pallbearers. Burial was made in the Union cemetery.

Mrs. W. J. Wisor Dead.

Mrs. Rachel Wisor, wife of W. J. Wisor passed away at the home at Port Matilda, on Wednesday evening, July 11th. She had been in failing health for some time from complications. Deceased was born in Clarion county in 1858. She was married twice, her first husband William Patton, passed away in 1918. She was united in marriage the second time with W. J. Wisor, who survives. She also leaves the following children: W. J. Wisor, Jr., Port Matilda; W. T. Patton, Tyrone; Mrs. John Sans, T. C. Wisor, G. C. Wisor and G. H. Wisor, of Trafford; Mrs. Clair Lewis, Northwood; Mrs. Thomas Harris, Port Matilda; Mrs. Robert Hirsch, Trafford; Mrs. Robert Looz, Toledo; Miss Claire Wisor, at home, and one step-son, W. E. Wisor, of Port Matilda. Funeral services were held from the home on Saturday afternoon and burial made in the Port Matilda Presbyterian cemetery.

Child Killed by Auto.

Louise Peron, 4, and Harry Ganoe, 6, coasting in a child's wagon on a hill in Houtzdale, met with a most regrettable accident last Friday afternoon when a wheel of the wagon caught a wheel of a car and was dragged for some distance before the driver stopped. The little girl was killed and the boy very seriously injured.

Struck Woman; Paid Costs.

In a hearing before Justice Ketchline, George Weiland, of Spring township, on Tuesday paid costs when arraigned for assault and battery, charges preferred by Adella Lucas. It appears that the couple fought after Mr. Weiland had first struck the woman.

HELPING THE FARMER

The farmer should pray to be delivered from his political friends. In the last Congress the farm bloc put through certain legislation on the plea that it would help the farmer. The grain futures act was part of this legislation. When it was enacted wheat was selling for $1.27. The price is now less than one dollar.

The emergency tariff and the Fordney bill, other measures, have increased the cost of everything the farmer buys, closed his foreign markets and advanced the cost of labor.

Farming conditions will not improve until the questions at issue between Germany and the Allies are settled, and until there is a market here for foreign goods taken in exchange for our surplus produce.

But the next Congress will see the quacks again at work trying to fool the farmer with silly legislation.

MRS. HICKEY SO WEAK COULD HARDLY STAND

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound
Restored Her Health

Worcester, Mass. — "I had some trouble caused by a female weakness and got so run-down and weak from it that I could hardly stand or walk across the floor. The doctor gave me all kinds of pills, but nothing helped me. I happened to meet a friend who had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I thought I would try it. After taking it a week I began to improve, and now I feel fine and am doing all of my housework, including washing, sewing and house cleaning. I have recommended your medicine to my friends, and I am willing for you to use this letter as a testimonial, as I would like to help any one suffering the way I did from such a weakness." — Mrs. DELIA HICKEY, 4 S. American Surgeon Honored in Europe

Dr. William J. Mayo, famous surgeon and head of the Mayo clinic at Rochester, Minn., is over in Europe this summer, attending surgical conventions, receiving honorary degrees and enjoying himself generally. Before he sailed he visited Montreal, where he was given the degree of Doctor of Laws by McGill university. At Trinity college, Dublin, he was made a Master of Surgery; and the University of Leeds gave him the degree of Doctor of Science. In London he attended the surgical congress of the Royal Society of Medicine, and later he read a paper on modern surgery before the International Surgical congress.

Interviewed on reported cures for cancer, Dr. Mayo said: "We oftentimes hear of so-called cures, but absolute cure is still far ahead. Few things, however, are improbable. There may eventually be a cure, but so far as I know, this relief has not been reached."

"The span of life in the last sixty years has increased from forty to fifty-two years on the average," said the surgeon, "an increase of twelve years in life's span. As cancer usually strikes the body after forty years of age this probably accounts for the seeming increase of cancer. Heretofore people died of other ailments before forty, or before the time when cancer usually begins to develop."

Elected the Third Bishop of Washington

In his earlier years a railway accountant, Rev. Dr. James E. Freeman has been elected, at the age of fifty-five, to be the third bishop of Washington, a place of high honor for which his fellow ministers and the Protestant Episcopal church generally think he is well qualified. In his new position he will be the head of the wonderful cathedral which is being built in the national capital.

Bishop Freeman was born in New York, and after passing through the public schools he spent fifteen years in the legal and accounting departments of the Long Island and New York Central railways. The late Bishop Henry C. Potter of New York had taken a great interest in the young man and induced him to enter the ministry, personally supervising his studies in that direction. In 1894 he was ordained deacon and the next year was made a priest, and after two years as assistant in St. John's church, Yonkers, he became rector of St. Andrew's Memorial church of that city. From 1910 until 1921 he was rector of St. Mark's church in Minneapolis, and then went to Epiphany church, Washington.

During the years of his ministry Bishop Freeman has done a lot of notable work, has founded and developed workmen's clubs and has served as arbitrator in various labor disputes. He is also the author of several volumes of prose and poetry.

Once Gaiety Girl, Now in Parliament

Not so many years ago one of the popular young women of the Gaiety theater in London was Mabel Russell, known as "the girl with the prehensile eyes." The other day, as Mrs. Hilton Phillips, she took her seat in the house of commons—the seat from which her husband, Captain Phillips, had been ousted because his agent had violated the corrupt practices act in the campaign.

The former Gaiety girl had counted a lot on being the wife of a successful politician, and when the Captain was unseated, through no fault of his own, she determined to keep the career in the family. So she went to the Conservative headquarters in London, presented her head to her old friend, Col. Leslie Wilson, chief whip of the party, used her "prehensile eyes" and her famous smile, and won the support of the party. In the election she was victor over two opposing candidates by a large majority. How in the world did she do it? There were the eyes and the smile. There was also the blue crepe moraine frock with its plain white Peter Pan collar. There was, too, a knowledge of men and women, a histrionic ability of no mean order, which, having served its purpose on the stage, was now to find expression in life.

She wore the same frock, the same Peter Pan collar when she was introduced into the house of commons. Lady Astor gave her a reassuring smile, but a Labor member laughed and called across to the peer's wife: "Cheer up, Nancy!"

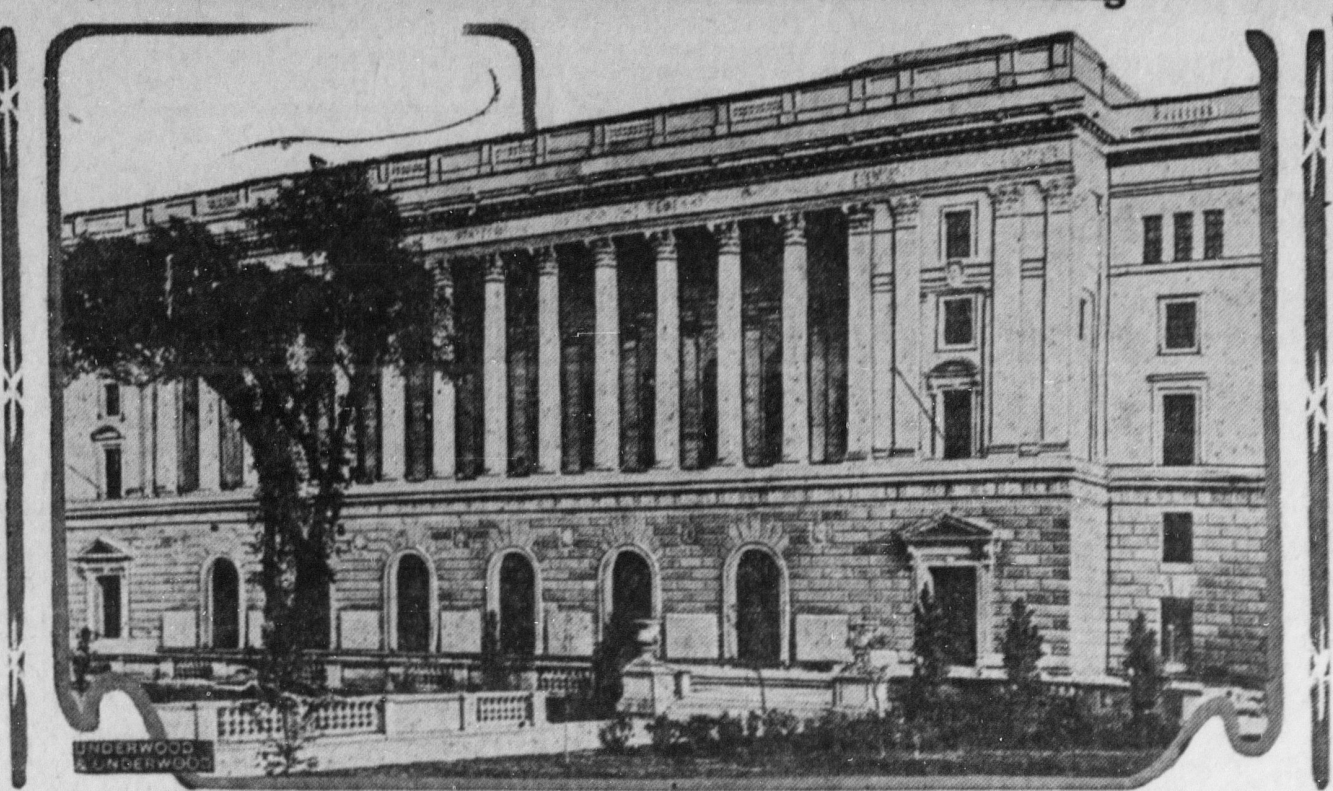

Judd, Explorer of the Chaco Canyon

Neil Merton Judd, director of the Pueblo Bonito expedition of the National Geographic society, has resumed exploration of the prehistoric ruins at Chaco canyon, New Mexico. Efforts are being directed to determine the water supply of this aboriginal apartment house of 900 rooms, considered to be one of the most important ruins in the United States. The expedition is also seeking to learn what forests supplied the beams used in the village, now 40 miles distant from any timber of comparable size. It is estimated the site has been deserted since years before Columbus came to America. If all rooms were occupied, it housed between 1,500 and 2,000 persons.

Mr. Judd, who was born in Nebraska in 1887 and was educated in the Utah and George Washington universities, is one of the leading archeologists of America. After engaging in exploration in Utah, Arizona and New Mexico, he joined the staff of the National museum as aid in ethnology and became successively assistant curator of anthropology and curator of American archeology. He restored the ancient Pueblo ruins in the Navajo National Monument in Arizona for the Department of the Interior in 1917, and has conducted various expeditions with marked success.

Alcohol Found Good Motor Fuel

French Chemists Experimenting to Find Cheap Substitute for Gasoline.

Paris.—French chemists are carrying out a number of interesting experiments with a view of substituting the use of alcohol made from sugar beets, grapes and other by-products of French industries for imported gasoline.

Various interests in France have long attempted to render their country independent of the United States, Great Britain and Holland in the supplying of fuel for motors. This independence is considered so pressing that suggestions are made that a state-produced gasoline substitute may be made and its use in automobiles be made compulsory. It is proposed to call the accepted fuel the "carburant national." The propaganda in favor of this national fuel has compelled the government and numerous scientific bodies to carry out many extensive and expensive experiments. The results of these tests were recently summarized in a valuable technical monograph prepared for the Association des Chemistes de Sucrerie et de Distillerie de France by M. Masfaraud, who showed that these results were obtained:

Efficiency is Increased.
Alcohol motors are about 25 per cent more efficient than petrol motors.

The combustion of alcohol gas is perfect and the escaping gases are quite inodorous.

The general use of alcohol for fuel in motors is perfectly feasible and is to be strongly recommended.

No difficulties would be experienced in placing on the market motors built to operate with alcohol.

The necessity for the adoption of alcohol as a source of power was clearly demonstrated in France during the war. But there was such a demand for alcohol for the manufacture of munitions that means had to be devised to conserve the supplies of alcohol in France and ration them.

An official commission was appointed in February, 1922, by the ministry of finance to fix the price of alcohol derived from the current beet crop. It recommended the enforced use of alcohol as fuel, or as an adulterant of gasoline, as an expedient for providing a regular market for the by-products of the agricultural industries.

Beziere, in the department of Hie-rault, was the scene last summer of extensive tests of automobile fuels made from mixtures of alcohol, gasoline and other substances. The results of these tests attracted considerable attention, not only in France, but throughout the world. Many mixtures proved valuable. The most effective results were obtained from a mixture suggested by M. Godchot, dean of the department of science of the University of Montpellier, which consisted of about 90 per cent gasoline, 9 per cent alcohol and small quantities of cyclohexanol and phenol. The committee in charge of the Beziere fuel tests was so impressed with the results obtained that it advocated legislation to compel the substitution of the Godchot mixture in place of gasoline for all purposes in France.

Notwithstanding the strong advocacy of a national fuel for France, the government has not yet taken a pronounced stand on this question because of the numerous economic problems involved. It would like to make France independent of imported fuels, cheapen the cost of automobile fuel and develop steady markets for the by-products of factories producing sugar, fruit, grape pulp, ciders and sherry, starch, wine, beer, brandy and similar articles. But difficulties arise from the fact that the price of alcohol is usually higher than that of gasoline and therefore the manufacture of the Godchot fuel would be expensive.

National Project Urged.
To overcome these economic problems it is proposed to establish a national alcohol office to control a monopoly of alcohol in France and to control the monopoly of manufacture of the "carburant national." In order that the alcohol fuel might be sold below the price of gasoline the excess cost would be offset by taxes on wines, ciders and other alcoholic beverages.

The French experiments instigated a series of similar tests in England. The Empire Motor Fuels committee had tests made with pure alcohol over the complete available range of mixture strength, with open throttle at piston speeds ranging from 800 to 2,000 per minute, and at compression ratios between 3.8 to 1 and 7 to 1. The results were very favorable to the use of pure alcohol.

The Germans have not neglected experimenting with alcohol as a motor fuel. There is an annual production of about 100,000,000 gallons of alcohol from potatoes in Germany, and some of this has long been used either in a pure state or mixed with petrol as an automobile fuel. It is found that a ton of potatoes, carrying about 16 per cent of starch, which promotes the fermentation, will yield 25 gallons of alcohol. As potato crops can be cheaply grown, they may in the future become important factors in the world's fuel supply.

Relief Offered by Corn.
In countries like the United States, which are favored with large corn-growing areas, maize might be used instead of potatoes. It is easy to raise, transport and store, and presents no difficulties in its conversion into alcohol.

Wood waste has been made to yield large quantities of alcohol. There are possibilities of using sawdust and the timber felled in clearing agricultural lands, as well as used lumber, for oil fuel. But practical difficulties will prevent the use of wood as a source of alcohol in all but a few favored localities. Distilleries using wood as a source of alcohol could rarely compete with those using farm products. Farmers have it in their power to produce a large number of crops suited to the manufacture of alcohol. The farmers of the United States alone could raise enough maize, potatoes, beets, and other crops to enable the world's motorists to substitute pure alcohol for petrol in all oil motors.

The Cubans make motor alcohol from the lowest grades of molasses and from bagasse, or spent cane fiber. Industrial alcohol has been made from these substances at a cost as low as five cents per gallon.

Throughout Central and South America alcohol has been used as a fuel, either in a pure state or admixed with petrol or kerosene. The results have

Builds Scaffold for Sister and Himself

Despondency over ill health caused the double suicide at Louisville, Ky., a few days ago, of George Schneider, fifty years old, and his sister, Anna. Schneider built a scaffold in a room of their home, and when his sister had hanged herself upon it, he ended his own life in the same way.

been satisfactory. Naturally, when a new fuel is used in a petrol motor without proper adjustments being made for it, smooth running cannot be expected. But when intelligence is employed in substituting alcohol for petrol in motors there are few grounds for complaint.

Tests in South Africa.
M. Masfaraud, in his address to the French Chemical association, drew attention to the experiments carried out in South Africa during the war and subsequently with alcohol-ether admixture fuels. Great success appears to have been met with in using a mixture called natalite, which is composed of about 54 per cent of alcohol, 45 per cent of ether and a little ammonia.

M. Lindet, a prominent French industrial chemist, has suggested the use of a motor fuel composed of an admixture of alcohol and acetylene. Many authorities look upon the suggestion favorably and in the near future it is proposed to test such mixtures on an extensive scale.

Among other mixtures tried in France those composed of alcohol, ether, benzol and pyridine, alcohol, toluene and xylene and alcohol, benzol and petrol have given satisfactory results.

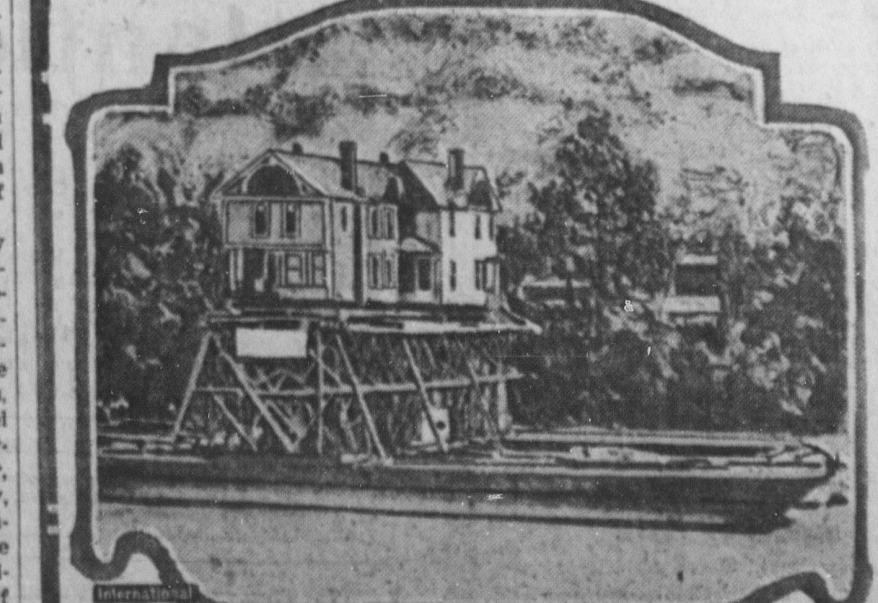

It seems probable, from a survey of the present state of the motor fuel problem in France, that it is only a question of time when alcohol produced from French agricultural products will be substituted for imported gasoline. This substitution will not be made directly, but by degrees. Mixtures of alcohol, petrol and other substances will be used and later, when the price of alcohol can be greatly reduced, it will replace the petrol mixtures.

The problem which at present confronts French chemists is how to produce a national fuel cheaply, and they realize, as one has cleverly remarked, that they must study the matter not only with present conditions in view, but with an eye to the future, or, as M. Masfaraud says: "Dans un avenir prochain."

Is World's Most Storied Volcano

Etna's Eruptions Have Engaged Attention of Writers Since the World Was Young.

Washington.—"The newspaper men who are writing hastily about Etna these days were scooped some years ago by at least three rather well-known fellow craftsmen: Homer, Pindar and Plato," says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society. "For this volcano, greatest in Europe and ranking with the greatest in the world, has been pouring out lava and ashes, destroying farms and villages and interesting philosophers and scientists since the world was young. Pindar was the first writer to mention Etna's fires, in 474 B. C., and since that time more than 100 eruptions are said to have taken place.

"A much more remote history of Etna has been pieced together by modern geologists who look upon the whole island of Sicily as a contribution from the great reservoir of molten material under the mountain. They picture a time when the sea rolled over the site of Sicily. Then, presumably in the Pliocene, Etna's tip emerged; and through the ages it has steadily built itself and Sicily up.

Both Creator and Destroyer.
"Etna might be described in the terms of an Eastern religion as both the Creator and the Destroyer. It has created Sicily; its disintegrated lava has given a soil of matchless fertility which supports rich vineyards and orchards; and it has drawn to its slopes, in spite of obvious dangers, hundreds of thousands of tillers of the soil and their towns and villages. As one writer puts it towns succeed towns along its base like pearls in a necklace, and when a stream of lava effects a breach in the chain of human habitations, it is closed up again as soon as the lava has had time to cool. Many of the villages on the mountain's slope are built almost exclusively from blocks of black lava, and have a somber, depressing aspect in consequence.

"It is on the lower slopes of Etna where time and weather have most completely broken up and washed down the ancient lava, that the creative side of the volcano is best seen. Virtually the whole circuit is a garden spot of date palms, bananas, oranges, lemons, olives, figs and almonds. Farther up are nut trees—notably the beautifully ordered filbert orchards near Castiglione—and a forest zone of chestnut, cork, pine and oak. Above 6,300 feet is the region that fire has kept for its own domain—a dreary, rough, black desert of lava and ash. Down from this region and into the forest and orchard and farm zones, tongues of molten lava have encroached at frequent intervals. These are left, significant warnings of Etna's potentialities for destruction, only so long as they must be. Some enterprising planters have blasted holes in fairly recent lava flows and have made the artificially fractured material support olive and almond and citrus trees.

One Town With Charmed Life.
"Few of the towns and villages near Etna have escaped destruction or serious damage from one or more of the numerous eruptions. One town that seemingly lives a charmed existence is Randazzo which, though less than ten miles from the crater, has always escaped. The city and port of Catania, about 20 miles from the crater, has on the other hand, been Etna's chief victim, and is reputed to have suffered more from eruptions and earthquakes than any other place of importance in the world. Because of partial destruction in 122, Rome remitted part of its taxes for a decade. There in 1169 the cathedral was overwhelmed by lava and its worshippers and bishop destroyed. In 1669 a river of lava rose above the 60-foot walls, poured into the streets, destroyed a large part of the city, and flowing into the sea, ruined the harbor.

"The streams that have poured

Truant Sleeps on Cornice of Building

Two policemen strolling along the street in New Britain, Conn., saw what appeared to be a bundle hanging over the cornice of a four-story building. They went to the roof and awakened Joseph Stanonis, sixteen years old, who was asleep on the cornice.

The boy had remained out late the night before, and, fearing parental wrath if he went home, climbed to the roof of the building where he was employed, lay down on the cornice, and fell asleep.

down Etna's sides during the past few days can hardly be different from the numerous preceding flows that have been so frequently described. The typical river of fire from Etna flows in a relatively narrow stream. It moves sufficiently slowly so that men and animals may keep out of its path, and large crowds of people assemble to watch its progress. It is a crowd of mixed emotions. Beside the small farmer, trembling lest the stream destroy his valuable orchards, may kneel peasants from a threatened village, weeping and praying that the flow be deflected, and tourists from a far land viewing what can be to them

How Fashion Is Making Fur Fly

Probable Extinction of Certain
Mammals Is Cause of Worry to Naturalists.

Washington.—Naturalists all over the United States are worrying over the probable extinction of certain of our mammals due to the decree of fashion that women wear furs all four seasons of the year. Museums are hastening to obtain specimens for their collections before it is too late. Newspapers say that we are enriching the interior of Africa by wearing monkey fur on our garments. Soon some of the animals which exist in abundance today will be in the class with the dodo and the auk.

"It is only by educating the American public to the need for periods of protection for these animals that we will be able to preserve one of the country's most valuable assets for the enjoyment and profit of future generations," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society from its Washington (D. C.), headquarters.

Seals Gone From Pacific Island.
"An expedition to the island of Gaudalupe off the coast of Lower California, which the National Geographic society recently helped finance for the purpose of finding if any specimens of the fur seals which once lived there in great colonies still were to be found, proved conclusively that no traces of these animals have appeared on the island for many years. They have been exterminated by unscrupulous fishermen. Unless the public comes to appreciate the danger menacing many of our other fur-bearers throughout the country, their life story may soon be that of the seal.

"It has been estimated that America spends yearly $100,000,000 for fur garments, the trade of fur merchants in raw and manufactured furs for import and export trade in New York alone being about $375,000,000.

"And for such a trade Billy Beaver, Tommy Marten, Jackie Skunk, and Harry Muskrat—to slip into the nomenclature of bed-time stories—are not only paying with their lives but a magnificent activity of Nature. Priests head processions of the pious country folk; candles are lighted, relics exhibited and altars set up.

"Beneath the rays of the sun the stream seems black except when, like the crest of a breaker, the edge of the oncoming wave breaks disclosing the angry, red interior and sending aloft sparks as the falling material shatters on the ground. When night falls the same activity seems tremendously increased. The stream is now a river of fire, a thing of fascinating but cruel beauty."

Man and Wife Joint Pastors of Church

Boston.—For perhaps the first time in the history of New England, husband and wife are joint pastors of the same church. Rev. Harold L. Pickett and Rev. Anita Trueman Pickett, just called to the pulpit of the Peabody Unitarian church, will take up their duties on a basis of absolute equality.

Mrs. Pickett is the extraordinary one of the couple. Before she took up the study for the ministry she was a successful lecturer, and was held in high respect by such men as Elbert Hubbard, Ralph Waldo Trine, Dr. Charles Wesley Emerson of the school of oratory by that name, and by such women as Ella Wheeler Wilcox and Margaret Sangster.

She was persuaded to enter the Unitarian ministry and in 1908 went to the Meadville Theological school in Pittsburgh, where she met the man who is now her husband. On their wedding day, she says, both filled pulpits, the husband preaching in the morning and she in the afternoon.

Mrs. Pickett has three children, and devoted herself to their rearing, not being ordained until two years ago. She shares the pulpit with her husband, but runs the home herself.

with the threatened existence of their kind. The high prices which have been offered for their pelts have led to intensive trapping, to the clearing of woodland and to the draining of marshes. In many parts of our country beavers and martens have been exterminated, and even Alaska is beginning to worry about the growing scarcity of fur-bearing animals within her boundaries.

"Some of the states of the Union have realized the danger into which they have fallen and are establishing close periods for some of the most valuable of the fur-bearers. Until a few years ago the farmer who had marshland infested with muskrats on his farm voiced violent prejudice against the little animals, and set out to exterminate them; now that same farmer knows that these muskrats can become as valuable as any of the live stock on his place. He protects them during the mating season, and takes only a reasonable number of pelts for market during the dead of winter when the fur is good.

"The great demand for furs has led to the rapid increase of fur-farming throughout this country and Canada. Recent reports say that there are already about 800 fox farms in Canada alone and that the owners of them are growing wealthy on their profits. The small fur-bearers are very prolific and there are millions of acres of land in this country where they would multiply in great numbers if they were given the proper encouragement, and if intelligence were exercised in taking the pelts.

Fur Farming Problems.
"The United States Biological survey has been making an intensive study of the best methods of raising wild animals in captivity, and reports that foxes have been raised with great success. Silver foxes, blue foxes, skunks and muskrats can be raised successfully, and further investigations are being made into the possibility of raising minks, martens and fishers, which up to the present time do not breed in captivity or else produce inferior animals.

"Various methods have been suggested for bringing the fur supply within the neighborhood of the demand. Large tracts in various parts of the country could be set aside as permanent preserves. It has also been suggested that the national forests of Colorado alone might be administered as game preserves, the national forests of Colorado alone being capable of producing $100,000 worth of fur each year by the conservation of the wild animals which already live within their confines."

Plan to Put Goiter Preventive in Water

Minneapolis.—The Minneapolis health department has under consideration, it was announced, a plan for treatment of the city water with sodium iodide to prevent simple goitre. This method of treatment, the sodium iodide supplying iodine, lack of which is said to cause goiter, was first advocated by Dr. William A. Plummer, goiter specialist with the Mayo clinic of Rochester. It is now being tried out in a number of cities in the Middle West.

CARRIES ITS SUPPLY OF OIL

Fish Equipped by Nature for Swift
Race It Has to Make Up Cold Yukon Waters.

A fish equipped with a special oil supply for a swift race up the cold Yukon river has been reported by Dr. C. H. Gilbert to the United States bureau of fisheries. The reason why this fish has this special oil supply is that it must maintain a speed from three to five times that of the salmon in other rivers, due to the fact that the season is very short, and that the spawning grounds are between 2,000 and 3,000 miles from the mouth of the river.

The Yukon "chum," a fish of lowlier degree, is similarly supplied with a special store of oil. Known generally as a species that spawns exclusively in the lower courses of streams, often scarcely above the reach of the tides and never far from salt water, in the Yukon it shows a remarkable reversal of habit, and under the spur of necessity rushes up the river 2,000 miles or more to the spawning grounds at a speed averaging 50 miles a day.

Explaining what happened yesterday as much fun as predicting what will happen tomorrow.

Poison Ivy

UNTIL you have used Zonite for ivy poisoning you will never know how quickly infections of this sort can be overcome.

Zonite is non-poisonous and non-irritating. It has greater germ killing power than pure carbolic acid and has more than seventy-five times the germ killing power of peroxide.

Carrying the Load.

The recent publicity given co-eds at the university has caused quite a lot of apparently "tongue-twisted" comments from the co-eds themselves. For instance, in substance, the following is a conversation between two of the fair damsels.

"Well, what do you think of the scandal that they are shooting at us about petting parties?"
Other co-ed: "I have passed it up as a huge joke."

"Why, sure; that's all it is. Why should they accuse all of them by actions of a few of us?"—Columbus Dispatch.

Betty Knew.

Betty had her little brother out playing with her. He fell down, and while he wasn't really hurt he set up a lusty yelling.

"Why don't you pick Bobby up and comfort him?" I asked Betty.

"Oh, he isn't hurt," she said, "cause he is just crying with his holler and his tears."—Exchange.

Her Only Flight Through Air.
Little Nellie's mother was entertaining a famous aviator. After he had finished a thrilling story, little daughter sighed deeply and said:
"I've clear forgot how it feels to sail through the air."
"Why, Nellie," said her mother in a shocked voice, "you were never in the air in your life."
"Gracious, mamma! Have you forgotten that the stork brought me?"—Everybody's Magazine.

Fashion in Clocks.
Not so long ago the bride was apt to receive ten or twelve clocks among her wedding presents. These were of the large kind adapted to the "parlor" mantel. People needed clocks more in those days than they do now in this day of wrist watches, yet clocks are still needed, but most of them are small and practically noiseless. Such clocks fill a real need on the dressing table, or a desk. The simpler ones are always in demand in the kitchen.

TELLS OF CHAUTAUQUA

Girl from Oregon Visited "The Republican" Yesterday.

Miss Ruth Lane, the "girl from Oregon" and second advance agent for Swarthmore Chautauqua, to be here from Saturday until next Thursday, was a visitor in "The Republican" office yesterday.

Miss Lane came to Bellefonte on Monday. She said she liked the town because it reminds her of home, excepting that her parents resided in a valley and the mountains rose all about them, snow capped and pretty, whereas Bellefonte is built right upon the hills.

She spoke also of Chautauqua, stating that the program is very good this year. She mentioned specially the opening entertainment by the Margery Jane Gage concert company and the Charles Ross Taggart musical comedy numbers for Monday evening. The lecturers were highly recommended and the Swiss yodlers termed a special—really Swiss.

Miss Dorothy Blackburn, a Lock Haven girl, will lead the Juniors. Their play this year is "Her Family on Display."

Miss Frances Maxwell, of Swarthmore, will be the Chautauqua superintendent.

The guarantors will hold a special meeting on Friday evening and every person interested in Chautauqua is urged to attend. Meet at the Y. M. C. A. at 8:30.

The children—Miss Lane said she wanted 500 of them but she didn't know that the Elks had 1,200 on Kiddies Day or she would have made the number larger—were wanted to meet at the High School on Friday evening at 6:45 and parade. The line of parade will be headed by a good band.

Lewistown Party in Bellefonte.

Lewistown Councilmen and a few business men, a party of 18, motored over the Seven mountains to Bellefonte on Tuesday morning and were guests of the local Councilmen. The visitors were much interested in the method of handling affairs here.

Appointed Trustees.

Mrs. Elizabeth B. Beach, of Bellefonte, has been appointed a trustee of the Industrial School for Women at Mauncy. Her sister, Miss Mary M. Blanchard, has been appointed a trustee of Huntingdon Reformatory. The appointments were made by Governor Pinchot.

Hazel—Sheffer Reunion.

The Hazel—Sheffer reunion will be held at the Grange Park at Centre Hall, on Thursday, August 23rd. It was to have been in June at Madisonburg, but had to be postponed on account of not being able to secure the grove.

Hands Blown Off by Dynamite.

An explosion of dynamite in the Woodward operation of the E. J. Minds Coal Co., resulted in both hands of Ephraim McGuire, being blown from his arms. His face and arms were badly burned and his eyes severely injured, though it is hoped his sight can be saved. The accident occurred on Monday afternoon while McGuire was working alone. He walked over a mile, then fell exhausted from loss of blood, being found a short time after by his son, who had him sent to the Cottage State hospital in Phillipsburg.

Typhoid Fever at Karthaus.

Eighteen cases of typhoid fever are reported at Karthaus. Special nurses have been sent there to aid in caring for the patients. State Health Department physicians and engineers were ordered to that place this week to ascertain the source of the disease germs. It is believed that several old wells, pressed into service because of the severe drouth, are responsible for the trouble.

Notice to Motorists.

The State Highway Department has issued a new ruling prohibiting the stopping of cars at the foot or crest of hills, or at turns in State highways. Another ruling prohibits parking a car at any point where all four wheels are on an improved highway. The new rulings aim to prevent accidents. Violations are punishable by a fine of $5 to $25 for each offense.
